

Our History

Our inn is best known as the home of controversial Senator and State Governor Ralph Owen Brewster. Brewster was most noted for his head-to-head conflict with Howard Hughes as shown in the Golden Globe award winning movie "The Aviator". Brewster was portrayed by Alan Alda that also starred Leonardo DiCaprio as Howard Hughes. Dignitaries such as President Harry Truman and Louis B. Mayer, co-founder of Hollywood film studio Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer once stayed here. Original construction as early as 1870, with later additions designed by noted architect John Calvin Stevens in the 1930's, turned this elegant Historic Register mansion (7600 sq ft) into the site of strategic rendezvous and political meetings. In Maine, elite society gathered here at the Brewster Inn, when they wanted to be seen in powerful company.
